

Zoe

Jett Skyler and Lilly look at the boys then back at Zoe, she begins her story as we see historic images and possibly a reenactment footage of her story.

ZOE

Some may say, that Jean St. Germain, Canadian genius inventor and the company that is now known as Aerodiam, Opened the very first indoor skydive facility in 1979 near Montreal, Canada. He built it so his kids could experience flight safely when they were young.

Zoe pauses for a moment

ZOE

So, yes, he was the 1st to bring it to the public in 1979. But who was the 1st to actually do it?

JETT

Yea. So, who?

ZOE

Around 1940, NASA built the 1st vertical wind tunnel at Langley Research Center to test the effects on their aircraft. Only problem was it was only 20 feet high and its max speed was 58 miles per hour. The Following year at the famous Wright Patterson Field near Dayton Ohio.

JETT

The U.F.O. Base where they took the Roswell crash?

DRAVEN

One in the same.

LOGAN

Have you seen Close Encounters of the Third Kind? True story man, and that's where it supposedly took place when the President sent back a 12-man team on a Secret exchange program to Planet Serpo and spent 10 years there.

ZOE

Guys! It was Holloman Air Base, not Wright Patterson and it was 10 men and 2 women. Jeez! Stay on point!

Draven and Logan hush up

ZOE

They built another more powerful tunnel which was operational in 1945. It was known as,

Zoe gestures to Logan, Draven and Bodhi like it's their cue.

BODHI, DRAVEN, LOGAN

(In Unison) Building 27

Zoe looks at them and rolls her eyes.

ZOE

Legend has it, that in 1964 at Wright Patterson, (looking at the boys) everyone was working around the clock on the top-secret Apollo Space Program. Well one very late night at 2 am, delirium started to set in and they were getting goofy due to lack of sleep when Parachutist and Researcher, Jack Tiffany, was working on the re-entry parachutes for the capsules return to Earth and he shouted "Fire this puppy up, I think I can fly!" at that moment he bravely jumped over the fan And sure enough he became the 1st ever to fly in a wind chamber at Wright-Patterson Airforce Base 1964.

JETT

So, where did you hear this story?

ZOE

My Dad. He was based there when he was in the service and heard the story.

JETT

What does your dad do now?

ZOE

Seriously?

Draven leans in pointing at Zoe

DRAVEN

Dude! Zoe, McAdams!

Jett ponders for a second.

JETT

OH! So, Your Coach Tanners Daughter?!

ZOE

Yea... Mom and Dad opened the Fly Factory when I was 3 and then when I was six, my mom died, and then it was just me and my dad. Skyler, who was my baby-sitter, became like my older sister. (Looking At Skyler)

SKYLER

I never knew who my father was so, I adopted Coach and Zoe. Love you, Zoe.

ZOE

Love you too.